BARACK.

Well. Congratulations on the—

HILLARY.

aw well thank you

BARACK.

was really

HILLARY.

unexpected.

BARACK.

Yes.

Yes, it was.

HILLARY.

Should we talk about that.

BARACK.

Oh I don't know that there's anything that needs to be said about that

HILLARY.

well, I would, I would like to talk about what's happened the past couple of days.

BARACK.

...Alright.

HILLARY.

I really did not expect what happened yesterday to happen.

BARACK.

And when you refer to what happened yesterday, you're talking about—

HILLARY.
the win

BARACK.
sure

HILLARY.
I didn't mean to

BARACK.
because that's not what it looks like

HILLARY.
I know

BARACK.
from the outside looking in,
it looks like a—a concerted effort to win

HILLARY.
I know

BARACK.
there was a change in strategy,
some kind of revamping of your campaign—the staff—
the addition of Bill, and—I mean I even just heard—just coming in here—just in the hallway there—that you let go of Mark—?

HILLARY.
Yes and no

BARACK.
you understand how it looks from my vantage point.

HILLARY.
I do

BARACK.

so

HILLARY.

but when I took the deal—
That wasn't some kind of underhanded sneaky way of trying to screw you over—

BARACK.

oh well—but even if it was

HILLARY.

and it wasn't

BARACK.

but hold on, hold on: If it was
I would understand.
It's not as if we had anything in writing—
there was no obligation to me. You did what you had to do, and maybe, maybe I let my guard down—my mistake—and you took advantage of the situation, of me, of—
You could call it a betrayal, but one person's betrayal is another person's reasonable action—you have to do what you have to do—
So, I get it—it's not what I would have done, but it's legitimate.

HILLARY.

Mistakes were made—hey you'll make mistakes too.

BARACK.

Clearly, I already have.

I'm trying to avoid making more.
